Dealing with Holiday Stress

The holiday season is upon us, while the time of joy and celebration for many, others may dread the additional stress, depression and sense of discontent it may bring. Holiday stress often revolves around relationships, finances and increased physical demands of the holiday season. Relationship tensions are often heightened during the holidays, and facing the holidays without a loved one can be tough and leave you feeling lonely and sad. Also, the added expense of gifts, travel, food and entertainment can put a strain on your budget. Finally, extra shopping and socializing can leave you exhausted, increasing your stress and creating a vicious cycle which makes you more susceptible to colds and other illnesses.

Here are 10 tips recommended by the Mayo Clinic for preventing or coping with holiday stress:

1. Acknowledge feelings of sadness or grief - You can't force yourself to be happy just because it's the holidays.
2. Reach out - If you feel lonely or isolated, seek out community, volunteering, religious or other social events.
3. Be realistic - The holidays will not be perfect. Choose a few traditions to hold on to, and create new ones.
4. Set aside differences - Try to accept family members and friends as they are.
5. Stick to a budget - Before you go shopping, decide how much money you can afford to spend and stick to it.
6. Plan ahead - Set aside specific days for shopping, baking, visiting friends and other activities.
7. Learn to say no - Saying yes when you should say no can leave you feeling resentful and overwhelmed.
8. Don't abandon healthy habits - Continue to get plenty of sleep and physical activity.
9. Take a breather - Spending just 15 minutes alone without distractions can refresh you.
10. Seek professional help if you need it - You may find yourself feeling persistently sad or anxious, plagued by physical complaints, unable to sleep, irritable and hopeless, and unable to face routine chores. If these feelings last for a while, talk to your doctor or local mental health providers.
